Extreme levels of Roundup detected in food.

Wednesday, April 30, 2014

This is getting to be too much.

It's especially distressing to me that when the maximum "safe" level is exceeded, the solution is simply to change the definition of "safe" level.

This cartoon appeared in a magazine decades ago.

"Bless this food, and protect us from the pesticides and additives therein."

It's not funny anymore just scary.

Edit: If the caption is too small, it reads:

"Bless this food and protect us from the pesticides and additives therein"

I've been reading studies about roundup levels and the rise in gluten intolerance. Interesting, crazy stuff... :(

It is getting pretty scary.

I agree they just increase the 'safe' level we need to be so vigilant.

Scary...! So many people (including me) don't realize what they're putting in their body when they eat...

That is distressing. Our foods from the grocery are getting less safe all the time!

This is what bugs me most about genetically modified foods. The claim is that, by making plants that can resist herbicides, there will be more food available, farmers will do better, and everything in the garden is lovely. HA! They spray so much poison on everything it is scary. Herbicide use has *increased*! And we are the experiment, finding out the hard way how bad that is for us.

Yep, definitely scary. Reinforces the need to eat truly organic. The word truly inserted here 'cuz qualifying criteria for USDA organic food labels does not mean 100% organic.
