What Spring Means to Me

Wednesday, April 09, 2014

I'm glad winter is over. I love to be outside in nature. Unfortunately, nature doesn't love me as much as I love it. Still I want go outside every chance I get. I want to see the flowers.

The beautiful bushes

and the trees

I just have to take a few preventative measures first.
(Flonase spray and chlortrimeton antihistamine)

Usually that's enough, but benedryl and decongestant are always on hand if needed.

Fortunately, the inhaler is rarely needed. Cigarette smoke is the main trigger there.
Can't blame nature for that.

No, nature makes the effort worthwhile

Looks like my counter top minus my Epi-Pen and medical mask. Love the plant photos. Have a row of Iris blooming along front curb line of our house. So far, just the yellow ones have opened up -- white, lavender, and purple 'in progress.'

The grass is just starting to green around here ... thanks for the images of hope (and survival)!

TERI-RIFIC

Beautiful. Loved seeing the pics. Nothing has bloomed here, yet I can't wait to see the blooms in real life. I'm glad you don't need the inhaler too much.

We are just beginning to see a few daffodils and forsythia blooms. I can't wait! Spring is my favorite season.

Jealous! Those scenes are about a month off for us. I don't know what Judith would say since she is dependent on everything in your first picture and then some.

I love the scenes - really pretty. Spring hasn't sprung yet over here and I cannot wait for blooming flowers, shrubs, mosquitoes and flies

Ooooh these pictures are BEAUTIFUL! I envy you for not having snow anymore (like the normal rest of the world) I can't even jog outside yet because there's still a lot of snow. Ah well!

LINDA

I can't wait for spring!! Lovely photos! My worst time is now with snow mold and dust blowing in the air. Finally get days warm enough to melt everything and the wind blows up a dust storm, but it is too nice to stay indoors.
I hear you on the smoke, every time I go home to my smoke filled apartment to shower or do work, I get sick -its been a relief staying at my Mom's!
Enjoy your spring days (ever consider wearing a mask? I am seriously considering it)

ONEKIDSMOM

Totally identify. The cold lasting so long here has been a blessing for my sinus passages... but when it finally springs forth with the buds? I'm right there with you!

MISCHAKEO

I love your pictures! I have been seeing the same blooms on my walks. It is so beautiful. I hope you are far away from smokers in your runs.

Thanks for making me smile this am.
