What Would Grandma Think of My Excuses?

Monday, January 02, 2017

I always find motivation by logging into Spark. Sometimes it hits close to home.

My DD#1 Hayburner1969 is BACK to Spark after 15 months of going it alone!

Her blog this morning was a nice surprise that got me thinking too.

"It's Not Like You Have to Saddle Up the Horse"

www.sparkpeople.com/mypublicjournalindividual.asp?blog\_id=6289282

Check it out.

I hope she finds the motivation and support here on Spark to get back to where she wants to be.

It was a good blog. There will always been a good excuse to use for not doing what we need to do. It's up to use to not use it.

My great grandmas and hers probably came from the same parts of the world! I could think of a few Slovak cuss words my grandmas taught me! HeeHee! I hope she finds the kind of motivation and encouragement I find here! Thanks for the link to her blog. Happy New Year!

What's that about acorns and oak mothers?

Something about nests, too, I think?

I love your daughter's perspective. Sounds like she absorbed some common sense from more than one of her ancestors!

I was reluctant to click on this blog title ... none of my g-mas would take any of my sh*t, er, I mean, excuses!

But it's Jeanne's blog that drives (accidental double entendre!) the point home!

THANK YOU!
